Crushed by a Mill Wheel.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

KINDRICK, VA., Feb. 4.—The son of Grden Reeves, a young man 17 years old. met a horrible death in his father's mill while repairing the mill recently.

An old lady was running the mill, and on some account she was unable to start the mill at this time, and called Mr. Reeves's son, who found the trouble to lie where the wafer from the race struck the mill wheel. The old lady, who was in the mill, turned on the water to see if the mill would now run, thus starting the water wheel, which caught the young man's head against a strong beam and slowly crushed his head to pieces. As the space between the beam and wheel wavery small, his head was savered from his bod, and mashed into a felly.

His lifeless body fell beside the foot of the beam, together with pieces from his crushed skull.

The old lady, thinking all was right, forgot all about the youth, but in a course of two or three 'hours something connected with her dules carried her around to the wheel.

of two or three hours something consected with her duties carried her around to the wheel.

The ghastly scene which met her gaze completely overcame her, and screaming she fainted, falling close by the lifeless cofpse. Parties hearing her scream came running up, and hastily taking in the situation ran to a nearby phone and asked for a physician for the old lady. They then proceeded to investigate the sickening sight. Finding his brains and attits of his skull around his liteless body, they readily guessed at his fate.

His body was taken home and builed anvist the tears of the strickened family. The old lady being well along if years and having her mind untallanced by the norrible sight, it is feared will never regain her right mind.
